

ANDREW
WOLSTENHOLME

20

CANARY WHARF

RESIDENTIAL

Architectural Fathers by Canary Wharf

Father: Andrew Wolstenholme

An Unsustainable Development, 15 December 2020

“With our new residential developments our estate is again evolving from a great place to work into a great place to live. This exciting new strategy will help shape Canary Wharf as a city of the future, creating a dynamic, integrated community that will serve as a template for contemporary urban living.”
Making Sustainability REAL, 2017.

Sir George Iacobescu, CEO, Canary Wharf Group plc.

When her father convinced her in a Crossrail tunnel that working with the environment would be a fantastic opportunity for her to spread her wings, she couldn't have imagined where it would lead. In this ecological parable of our time Canary tells the inspiring story of a woman who refused to stagnate in her polluted domestic environment, but instead left to help us live greener, more sustainable lives.

In the opening volume of the new series of her memoirs, ‘An Unsustainable Development,’ leading environmentalist Canary Wharf sketches out her unique contribution to Canary Wharf's ecological strategy by opening up for the first time about the infamous eco-stove affair that occurred during her time spearheading the groundbreaking eco-stove community ‘Cosy Wharf.’

By taking us beyond crude tabloid headlines, such as ‘Putting the wood in Wood Wharf,’ Canary reveals the science behind the scandal as she graphically conveys how her relations with a mysterious woodman gave way to profound ecological insight that not only turned the stove community on its head, but catapulted her to the vanguard of the global environmental field.

www.ocr.fyi

32 pages
148x210mm